

FIRST GLIMPSE OF NEW YEAR'S EVE PHOTOGRAPHS FROM WORLDWIDE COMPETITION

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

TORONTO - Friday February 4th, 2000 – The Millennium Photo Project (www.millenniumphoto.com) today launched a very first glimpse of the many fascinating photos that have come in as a result of the largest photojournalism project in history.

"We have watched with great excitement every day as hundreds of packages have arrived at our door, all containing the diverse New Year's Eve experiences of people from across the globe." said Project Founder Alx Klive. "Our deadline has now passed and we're still receiving fifty packages a day."

The project, which launched in April of last year, signed up thousands of photographers worldwide to go out on New Year's Eve and document this historic occasion. The very best photographs from that night will go into a unique coffee-table book to come out later this year.

"The quality of submissions has been excellent. It's clear now that many people put an incredible amount of effort and creativity into their shoots. It's quite humbling actually."

The Millennium Photo Project's 'Photo of the Week' can be found at <http://www.millenniumphoto.com>. The pictures begin with January 1st and a new one goes up every Saturday throughout the year 2000.
